Daintree Networks the leader in open networked wireless control and operation solutions for smart buildings, today announced it has been listed by CIO Review Magazine as one of the '50 Most Promising Internet of Things (IoT) Solution Providers 2015' and '100 Most Promising Big Data Solution Providers 2015.' The lists feature the best vendors and consultants providing technologies and services related to IoT and Big Data.

This announcement comes on the heels of the company being named one of CRN's '2015 Internet of Things 50' just last week. Daintree Networks is driving the Enterprise-IoT (E-IoT) market as a leading provider of wireless mesh networking solutions with robust data analytics for smart building control and operation.

CIO Review endeavors to identify 'The Best' in a variety of areas important to tech business. The CIO Review editorial board, analysts and a distinguished panel comprised of CEOs, CIOs, CTOs, chose the list of top companies at the forefront of tackling challenges in the IoT market in the U.S., and Big Data challenges impacting the market place.

The Big Data Special issue and 100 Most Promising list was published in October, while the IoT Special issue and 50 Most Promising list was published in November.

Daintree Networks® is a trusted and leading provider of smart building control and operation solutions, the core application for the Enterprise Internet of Thingsâ„¢. Daintree's ControlScope® is an open standards-driven control, monitoring, and optimization solution for facility, operations, energy, and sustainability professionals.
